HAMMARSKJOLD-EGYPT AGREEMENT

Presence And Mission Of Police Force

United Nations, Nov. 21.

The memorandum, attached to the report on the mission of the United Nations police force in Egypt, which the Secretary-General, Mr Dag Hammarskjold today submitted to the General Assembly, summed up the main results of Hammarskjold's discussions in Cairo with President Nasser.

The memorandum said: "The Government of Egypt and the United Nations Secretary-General have declared their agreement on the basic points relative to the presence and the mission of the international force in Egypt."

It listed three points as follows:

In Good Faith

★ 1. The Egyptian Government declared that in exercising its sovereign rights in all questions concerning the presence and the mission of the international force, it would be guided in good faith by the acceptance of the General Assembly's resolution of November 3 last.

★ 2. The United Nations took note of the Egyptian declaration and stated that the activities of the international force would be guided in good faith by the aims set down in the General Assembly's resolutions. The United Nations, in particular, undertook that the force would be guided in good faith by the wishes of the Egyptian Government, dedicated to maintain the international peace and to fulfil its task.

★ 3. The Egyptian Government confirmed its intention of facilitating the task of the international force and the United Nations agreed to co-operate to ensure the carrying out of the guiding principles adopted, following the joint examination of the basis of the General Assembly's resolutions.

Confirmed Intention

The Egyptian Government confirmed its intention of facilitating the task of the international force and the United Nations agreed to co-operate to ensure the carrying out of the guiding principles adopted, following the joint examination of the basis of the General Assembly's resolutions.

In commenting on these texts, a United Nations spokesman remarked the question of the withdrawal of the international force from Egypt remained intact.

In the second report, annexed to his report on the establishment of the international police force, the Secretary-General asked the General Assembly's permission to negotiate with specialized firms for the clearing of the Suez Canal. This request was in conformity with the wishes of the Egyptian Government.

The report stated that the Egyptian Government considered that the clearing of the Canal should be begun immediately after the withdrawal of non-Egyptian forces from Port Said and the Canal zone.

French And British

A spokesman for the Secretary-General, interpreting the text of the annex report, said the non-Egyptian forces referred to the French and British troops.

The annex report added that Hammarskjold had given the Egyptian authorities the assurance in principle that the United Nations would aid in clearing the Canal.

The report stated that the Canal would not come from any country involved in the present Egyptian crisis.

Once the General Assembly had authorized the work, the Secretary-General would negotiate with the firms concerned, which the United Nations would not negotiate directly.

UN Secretariat sources commented that the United Nations would not intervene in the conclusion of subsidiary contracts necessary for clearing the Canal.

Costs Unknown

Mr Hammarskjold asked for authorization to commit UN funds so that the work could begin as soon as possible. The question of financing the clearing of the Canal would only be taken up in the Assembly when an itemised bill of the expenses of the operation has been drawn up.

The Secretary-General said that for the moment, he could not indicate the amount of the costs.—France-Press.

PARTIALLY ALLEVIATED

"Because there has been an UNKRA, the sufferings of the Korean people have been at least partly alleviated and the ravages of war in Korea at least partly erased," said the US delegate.

"In years to come, the agency will continue to stand as a symbol not only in Korea, but throughout the world, of what co-operative action among nations has done to make life a little better, a little less burdensome for men, women and children who were called upon to endure far more than human beings should."

Press Freedom Declined Since War

London, Nov. 22.

Britain's Press Council begun as an experimental organisation to guide newspaper ethics and standards, has now become an institution, Sir Linton Andrews, its chairman, wrote today.

In a foreword of the Council's third annual report he said the work of the organisation is increasing, not because of more violations of the freedom of the press or journalistic misdeeds, but because more complainants look to it for trustworthy judgment.

A large part of the report is concerned with relations between the British Royal Family and newspapers. The Council also warns that there is much evidence that press freedom has declined in various parts of the world since the end of World War II.

Voluntary

The Press Council is a voluntary organisation established by the newspaper profession itself to examine and publish its views on complaints made to it about newspapers.

In his foreword Sir Linton, who is editor of the Yorkshire Post, said that though the Council has no statutory powers to impose sanctions, it believes it is doing much good through its power of censure and publicity.

He declared: "There are still those who complain that the Council takes on itself too much or too little. Some ardent reformers want it to pluck out and destroy the kind of information and comment that distress their sensitive minds but not those of the mass of readers."

The Press remained under heavy fire from many quarters, not all of them free from prejudice. Many critics honestly believed that because they could not get the press remoulded to their own desire this must be because the Press Council was ineffective.

Much Evidence

The report itself said: "There is much evidence that press freedom has declined in various parts of the world since the end of the war. This fact makes it

POSTAL SERVICES RESUMED IN HUNGARY

Paris, Nov. 21.

Radio Budapest reported tonight that Hungarian postal services were partially resumed today.

Several Budapest post offices began sending out telegrams today and notices were sent out to persons with packages in the post offices to come and get them.

Radio Budapest said the packages could not be delivered because of the lack of mail trucks.

Mail from Budapest was distributed today for the first time in eight major provincial cities.

Purchases

The broadcast also reported that the General Council of Csanad County had made an agreement with the Rumanian city of Timisoara and the Yugoslav city of Zenta for the purchase of oil, salt, and other products lacking in the country.

Radio Budapest denied reports that bus drivers were on strike and that members of the Budapest Workers Council had been arrested. The broadcast reprimanded the spreaders of false rumours.

Conditions

Meszaros, in the name of the Hungarian farming co-operatives, called for free elections at all echelons in the co-operatives, a large state contribution toward the rehabilitation of agricultural machinery, the return and rehabilitation of co-operative leaders unjustly ousted, improvements in housing, heating, lighting facilities in the co-

European Oil Supplies Believed Assured

HERBERT HOOVER, JR.

US WILL PROBABLY RECONVENE MIDEAST GROUP

Paris, Nov. 21.

Oil company and government quarters said here today they welcomed the assurance they understood to have been made yesterday by Mr Herbert Hoover, acting American Secretary of State, that the United States would help meet Europe's oil needs through the 17-nation Organisation for European Economic Co-operation.

Sources close to the OEEC believe the United States will probably reconvene the Middle East emergency committee devoted last August to make up any loss of oil shipments from the Middle East because of the Suez crisis, when the OEEC's own preparations are completed.

They added that American representatives participating in the OEEC committee handling the oil problem have approved the three major steps taken so far by the organisation.

Allocations

These are the setting up of a co-ordinating committee, associating this committee with an advisory group from the oil industry, and working out a mechanism for oil allocations throughout Europe.

M. Paul Reynaud, wartime French Premier, told the National Assembly here today that the United States would not provide enough oil or, if they did, France would have difficulty in paying for it.

Oil and shipping experts in London said that the New York dock strike, even if it spread to other Atlantic ports and to the Gulf oil ports, would not be likely to affect the oil situation, at least at this stage. Oil is loaded and unloaded at special installations, not by dockers.

On one occasion, when a dock strike spread to the tug and bargeage, there was some disruption, but that has happened only once in the past seven years and is not a normal consequence of a dock strike as such.

Seek Other Uses

If the strike spread and lasted, the most serious effect on the oil situation would be by its impact on US coal shipments to the Continent. Britain's stocks of coal at present are unusually high, but the Continent depends heavily on American coal.

If dislocation of oil loading and unloading in the US did occur, the Venezuelan oil, and many Caribbean and US coastal tankers, would have to seek other uses. If the strike continues, it will affect coffee and other dry cargoes, and also liner movements, but not oil and other bulk liquids.—China Mail Special.

HUNGARIAN REFUGEES ARRIVE

New York, Nov. 21.

The first plane load of refugees from Communist tyranny in Hungary touched down today at McGuire Air Force Base, New Jersey, to a new life in a free land.

"Patriots of Hungary, America welcomes you," Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker told the 60 refugees, men, women and children, in a brief ceremony when they stepped from a Flying Tiger transport plane which brought them from Europe.

"Your suffering under the bloody lash of tyranny has touched the hearts of us all," Brucker continued. "Your magnificent show of courage in the face of terror has uplifted our faith."

"Americans have shared your pain as we will always share with every captive of despotism the gallant courage of his chains. We know that in the final reckoning, the crucifixion of liberty anywhere is the crucifixion of liberty everywhere."

VANGUARD

The refugees were the vanguard of an expected 5,000 who have been offered freedom in America under a "Project Mercury" drift and housing plan offered by the army and the 27-nation Inter-governmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM).

They go in buses from here to 45 miles to camp Kliner, New Jersey, where their welcome was strictly American—a snack of coffee and doughnuts.

In the welcoming ceremony as they left the plane, an army band played Hungarian songs.

Among those on the welcoming stand was Maxwell R. Rabb, representing the White House and Scott McLeod, security and consular affairs administrator of the State Department.—United Press.

Eight Rebels Killed

Algiers, Nov. 21.

French troops killed eight rebels today while rebels destroyed three farms in the most important incidents reported in rebellious Algeria for the past 24 hours.

The incidents were insignificant in comparison to the major battles and wholesale outrages of recent months.

They seemed to bear out French Minister-Resident Robert Lacoste's contention at the Cabinet meeting in Paris today that "the rebellion is wearing itself out."—United Press.

Mr. Nabulsi made a statement explaining how Jordan's relations with Britain at the present time prevented the abrogation of the Anglo-Jordanian Treaty of 1948. He also referred to the stationing of Iraqi troops in Jordan.

It is understood that negotiations are now being held regarding the presence of Iraqi troops in the country.

Iraqi troops with Syrian and Saudi Arabian contingents moved in at the request of the Jordanian Government following the Anglo-French-Israeli intervention in Egypt last year.

Attempt To Sabotage Vietminh Regime

Hanoi, Nov. 21.

The newspaper Nhandan (The People), organ of the North Vietnam Workers (Communist) Party, today declared that "reactionary bands never let an opportunity go by to try to sabotage the North Vietnam regime, as proved by the troubles which occurred in the Quynhluu district, about 25 miles north of Vinh."

Giving details of the events in an article entitled "Vigilance," the paper said: "Those responsible for the troubles were reactionary bands, valets of the American and Diem (South Vietnam President, Ngo Dinh Diem), who were plotting by the numerous errors committed during the agrarian reforms, the attacks made on the freedom of religion and the legitimate claims of the masses, to force some of their compatriots to sabotage order and oppose the local authorities."

Practical Criticism

The newspaper said these differences should be settled by practical criticism and self-criticism and by the union of the masses around the Communist Party and government.

The newspaper said that at Quynhluu the "reactionaries" had succeeded in leading the young people of the region into a military training programme. Simultaneously, they barricaded the villages, forcing peasants to give them food.

An administrative and military delegation was sent to the spot. By order of the "reactionaries," the youths and the population, on the night of November 5, seized 28 soldiers, wounded 60, and seized their arms, after having accused them of wishing to crush religion and molest the population.

Hostile Slogans

On the afternoon of November 13, the same bands incited the Catholics of several regions to assemble, armed with sticks and lances, and demonstrate in Quynhluu, shouting slogans hostile to the Government, the newspaper said.

Despite advice to remain calm from the military authorities, the newspaper said, the leaders attacked them, killing one and wounding several.

At this point, troops intervened and the "Catholic" (political) cadres of the people's regime tried to stop the Catholic peasants from continuing their advance.

In the shooting that followed, several persons were killed or

OFFICERS ARRESTED COUP WAS NEAR IN INDONESIA

Djakarta, Nov. 21.

Indonesian Army headquarters announced today that "peace and order has been maintained" in admitting for the first time publicly that a weekend army revolt threatened the existence of the government.

One newspaper reported that 20 army officers would be dismissed for plotting a coup to overthrow the Government because of its alleged "corruption" and leftist leanings.

Army headquarters officially said that "some officers suspected of being involved in a movement not in accord with army law and discipline" had been interrogated.

Accusing Finger

The announcement said that Army Chief of Staff Major-General Abdul Harris Nasution had "finished interrogating and disciplining" the officers and their cases will be turned over to the army prosecutor, presumably for trial. So far, four officers have been disciplined and two of them dismissed from their posts.

Army headquarters, also for the first time, pointed an accusing finger at Col Zulkifli Lubis implying that the popular military commander was the leader of the planned coup.

The army in its announcement mentioned by name Col Lubis whose whereabouts are still unknown. He is said to have left the capital secretly.

The announcement said "documents and witnesses in the hands of the army staff showed that Col Lubis had made plots against the Government by planning to use force to achieve his goal of wanting to change the basic philosophy of the Republic of Indonesia."

Twice Refused

Headquarters charged that Lubis twice refused to report to Gen. Nasution and that he could be "accused of deserting" because of his absence for the past 12 days.

However, headquarters did not say if Lubis would be prosecuted.

Lubis had been appointed as commander of the first military district in north Sumatra but the agency added.—Reuter.

according to most sources it seemed most likely that his command change would be cancelled. Army headquarters today refused to say whether other military or police units were still on alert. —United Press.

Not Confined

It said "peace and order has been maintained" by the 7th Infantry Regiment and the Djakarta Military Command which was alerted Friday evening.

Although the Djakarta Military Command has announced that its troops no longer were confined to barracks, army headquarters today refused to say whether other military or police units were still on alert. —United Press.

Chou Feted In Hanoi

London, Nov. 21.

North Vietnam President Ho Chi Minh this evening gave a State banquet in Hanoi in honour of China's Premier Mr Chou En-lai and his party, now visiting Vietnam, the New China News Agency announced.

President Ho in a speech at the banquet said Mr Chou's South Asia tour would "strengthen the solidarity of the Asian people and develop still further the five principles" of peaceful co-existence.

In reply, Mr Chou said the visit was very valuable and he and his party had learned many things from the Vietnamese people.

North Vietnam Premier Pham Van Dong was also present at the banquet which was attended by nearly a hundred persons, the agency added.—Reuter.

FIVE MINUTES OF SHEER ESCAPISM

By David Lewin

The news lately has been wholly concerned with a world in crisis: today — marvelling slightly at how large the world still is and how much of it is still controlled by the impervious forces of Nature — Page Four prints a dispatch about a set of men who have been wholly concerned with — turtles. The author has been in the West Indies covering the new boom in film-making there; in this story, however, POSITIVELY NO FILM STARS APPEAR. It is, as we say, SHEER escapism.

Tobago, called Bird Island about 200 miles west of the British island of Dominica. Bird Island is too small to be marked on most maps.

In British St. Lucia they have been told about Bird Island, which is a desert strip of sand 600 yards long by 100 yards wide. There is no habitation, no trees, nothing. It belongs to Venezuela.

The Bonnie Ethel refused to pay £125 for a pilot to take them to Bird Island and made it unsailed.

There they found an astonishing light. For living on Bird Island is a one-time Englishman named Adam Braithwaite, who says he is now American and has spent most of the last two years on "deserted Bird Island."

He sailed in the tiny, thumb-nail-size Scotch fishing trawler Bonnie Ethel. Ethel has no radio, just a compass, and the skipper is a Pole called Snek, who brought the ship into these waters from North Ireland with a crew of one, another Pole.

And then the Bonnie Ethel on her turtle trip was missing. She was three days overdue, and radio stations throughout the British West Indies put out urgent messages asking ships to keep a look-out.

His home

I WENT searching for the Bonnie Ethel and found her off the island of Grenada, riding in the swell from a not-too-distant hurricane.

Captain Snek and the mate and Fowler were out of fresh water and living on boiled bananas. Even the rum had gone. But they had found turtles—enormous ones. They found them on a dot of land and once every two months a schooner from St. Lucia arrives to pick up.

On St. Lucia the turtles are "processed" and go for soup to be sold to Britain and the rest of the world.

Braithwaite's yearly haul of turtles is 3,000. The average weight of a turtle is 100lb. and the price is 1s. a lb. Work that out, and Mr Braithwaite can collect the best part of £15,000—tax free.

For the two nights the Bonnie Ethel anchored off Bird Island Braithwaite slept aboard.

Fowler told us: "He tried to interest the skipper in joining him in the turtle and bird business. He seemed to think there was a great future in it, and there was certainly plenty of money."

As the Bonnie Ethel pulled away Braithwaite, standing under the iron flagpost flying the flag of Venezuela, waved his visitors goodbye, then returned to his turtle-hole home.

"Doesn't it get a bit lonely here?" asked Fowler.

"Noisy at night, perhaps," said Braithwaite, "and you don't get much conversation. We live on canned stuff and turtle meat, and sometimes we catch fish, but we have no boat. Water is stored in 50-gallon drums.

"We have no worries except when the schooner is late picking us up. Then the water runs out and there is nothing but turtle meat left to eat."

For the two nights the Bonnie Ethel anchored off Bird Island Braithwaite slept aboard.

Fowler told us: "He tried to interest the skipper in joining him in the turtle and bird business. He seemed to think there was a great future in it, and there was certainly plenty of money."

As the Bonnie Ethel pulled away Braithwaite, standing under the iron flagpost flying the flag of Venezuela, waved his visitors goodbye, then returned to his turtle-hole home.

Fowler said: "How does it work?" Braithwaite: "Simple. Turtles come in by hundreds to lay their eggs. The boys and I kill them and once every two months a schooner from St. Lucia arrives to pick up.

On St. Lucia the turtles are "processed" and go for soup to be sold to Britain and the rest of the world.

Braithwaite's yearly haul of turtles is 3,000. The average weight of a turtle is 100lb. and the price is 1s. a lb. Work that out, and Mr Braithwaite can collect the best part of £15,000—tax free.

Braithwaite also does a large trade in the deposits of the birds which circle squalling through the night.

"Doesn't it get a bit lonely here?" asked Fowler.

"Noisy at night, perhaps," said Braithwaite, "and you don't get much conversation. We live on canned stuff and turtle meat, and sometimes we catch fish, but we have no boat. Water is stored in 50-gallon drums.

"He may be right, he may be wrong, but I think I preferred him when all we knew about him was his hat."

DON IDDON'S DIARY

as Americans see Suez NOW

Can Selwyn Lloyd rub the tarnish off our name?

only a few days after a leisurely trip across the Atlantic in the Queen Elizabeth, and has not made any news or expressed any views yet.

So it is up to Mr Lloyd.

The British today in the U.S. are by no means as highly regarded as when the paratroopers were landing and the bombs were dropping on Egypt.

The words being used about the Suez venture are "fiasco," "letdown," "backdown," "humili-

He adds: "Can the West expect that in the Middle East any attention will be paid henceforth to British or French warships?"

The American Press is speaking with one voice, and so are the American people.

During the past few days my neighbours, my friends, strangers at parties, elevator men, and taxi-drivers have said the same thing. "If you are going to do a job do it properly and don't stop half-way."

The same people who were shaking our hands ten days ago are now shaking their heads.

The millions of Jews in America are disillusioned and despondent.

It is no use my saying, although I go on doing so, that American pressure was to a great extent responsible for the abrupt ending of the Anglo-French move in the Middle East.

Venomous

IT is no use my saying, although I go on saying, that the crisis would never have happened but for the bankrupt policy of Mr John Foster Dulles.

The Americans know, and we know, that Dulles bamboozled us, but that's old history now.

We stand this day at the lowest ebb of prestige in the United States that I have ever known. And no wonder, when Englishmen write to the American Press denouncing their own country with venom and viciousness.

Since Mr Michael Foot, lecturer at Keble College, Oxford, had his infamous letter published in Sunday's New York Times here, I have been deluged with messages. "What sort of an Englishman is this?"

Mr Foot wrote, and millions of Americans read, "The United States is a free friend of our country she will never condone what we have done."

"Without overtly moralising she must at all costs insist on the fact of our aggression; on our absolute exclusion from any U.N. police force sent to interfere with the Canal Zone, on sending any U.N. force to police the desert border, and not a disputed British interest 100 miles inside Egyptian territory."

Non-sense, say I!

People pay their 25 guineas a seat for one reason only—the Queen will be there.

And why not let the Queen meet a few of the technicians—the cameramen whose artistry contributes so much?

No room for them? Then let the 'moguls' who are presented every year volunteer to stand down.

In brief, let the Royal Command Film Performances look more like a charitable fund-raising drive, and let the artists be chosen and selected like a publicity stunt.

Let them use their own Presidential, said he.

But listen to my aforementioned anonymous informant:

"The Royal Show is a commercial venture," he explained. "Stars like Marilyn Monroe are the ones who people will pay 25 guineas a seat to see."

Non-sense, say I!

BRITAIN STANDS TODAY AT THE LOWEST EBB OF PRESTIGE IN THE UNITED STATES THAT I'VE EVER KNOWN

New York, Tuesday. HO will speak for Britain here? Many are speaking against her.

There are the Arabs and the Indians in their impeccable Oxford English, the Russians, a scattering of South Americans, and a number of alleged Englishmen who have chosen their country's travail to betray her in the American Press.

I hope Mr Selwyn Lloyd will raise his voice and prove his stature.

He has started well. He is here at the General Assembly, and if he has been listening to what the Americans are saying, and what the American newspapers are printing, he must realise that this crisis in our prestige must be dealt with.

Sir Pierson Dixon, our permanent delegate to the U.N., has done his polite best—quiet, elegant, untruffled, but lacking fire and fervour.

Only poise

I saw him at the United Kingdom headquarters at 99, Park Avenue when the crisis first began and congratulated him on his first speeches before the United Nations. He has kept his nerve and his poise, but the righteous anger has been missing.

Our new Ambassador, Sir Harold Caccia, has been here indict us.

Here is Drew Middleton, a close American friend of Sir Anthony Eden and a champion of Britain for years in his dispatches to the U.S. from London.

"Individuals and organisations believe that Britain has suffered a severe defeat in the Middle East and that her days of military, political, and diplomatic influence in that area are drawing to a close."

Middleton and others point out that the British and French Governments were unable to resist the criticism of their friends or the threats of their enemies.

ROYAL FILM SHOW UNDER FIRE!

By ROBERT ROBINSON

London. NIGHT of a hundred stars? Night of a hundred jealousies?

I speak, of course, of Royal Command Film Performances, at which some 20 hand-picked stars are presented to the Queen—and considerably more than 20 gnash their glossy molars in the background.

"We get a lot of invitation-fishing from starlets who feel they ought to be on the Presentation List," I was told by one in close touch, who must remain anonymous. "But if they ask, they are ruled out."

Then who does get picked? "Stars who have done notable film work over the past year," my backstage friend told me.

Which strikes me as odd. For it does not account for the presentation this year of a young actress whose talent has been confined to the stage. Nor does it account for the absence of others who gave notable performances on the screen.

As I see it, the show has two objects:

One: to make money for the Cinematograph Trade Benevolent Fund (£225,000 this year).

Two: to boost the BRITISH film industry.

How is the British film industry, boosted if British film actresses are excluded, and HALF the places on the Presentation List are awarded to American stars?

Peter Finch, star of the film which was the Queen's choice, "Battle of the River Plate," agrees with me.

"Why use our Queen to give the Americans publicity?"

"Let them use their own Presidential," said he.

But listen to my aforementioned anonymous informant:

"The Royal Show is a commercial venture," he explained. "Stars like Marilyn Monroe are the ones who people will pay 25 guineas a seat to see."

Non-sense, say I!

People pay their 25 guineas a seat for one reason only—the Queen will be there.

No room for them? Then let the 'moguls' who are presented every year volunteer to stand down.

In brief, let the Royal Command Film Performances look more like a charitable fund-raising drive, and let the artists be chosen and selected like a publicity stunt.

Let them use their own Presidential, said he.

But listen to my aforementioned anonymous informant:

Puzzled

THE puzzling thing to almost everyone here, except the Government officials who put the pressure on, Eden and turned the screws hard, is why we bogged down in an operation that is not even a half-measure and fails to topple the dictator Nasser.

Surely the Bulgarian black-mail note or even the urging of Mr Eisenhower on election day, should not have been sufficient to pull Sir Anthony up.

The U.S. today is anxious to close ranks, but we are regarded now as a very junior partner over whom the super-Powers, America and the U.S.S.R., tower.

The President, given, as almost completely free hand by his vast popular majority, has been in one crisis conference after another, but with John Foster Dulles, ill, and no successor visible, the plan for the Middle East seems to be to have no plan; to stand pat on the powder-keg.

Perhaps Mr Selwyn Lloyd can galvanise our American allies into action, and a faithful co-operation.

Perhaps he can do something to restore the standing and respectability of the British brand.

He has a breathing time.

'Rock bottom'

ABOVE all else, must insist on completely separating the question of the management of the Canal from the Israeli-Egyptian war, which we have so badly exploited.

"It appears to us that unless our country is now contented without qualification by those whose hands are still clean we may fail to repudiate our leaders and their acts."

Then those who fail to condemn us will come to share our guilt and our responsibility for what is going on in the hour of greatest need.

YOUR BIRTHDAY ... By STELLA

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22

BORN on this day of the month, you are ruled by Jupiter, the God of Fortune. You seem to have the wisdom of the ages in you and are a true leader and philosopher. You have the equal right of all to enjoy all benefits of a basic creed. Although ambitious, you would never use the success ladder by stepping over others. You always will proceed in the normal fashion, one step at a time. You have tremendous will-power and when you want something, you intend to get it eventually. It may take time, but one day you will achieve your life's ambition. Magnificence and power have the ability to speak convincingly in public. You also have the gift of the written word and should try all means to make full use of this gift. You are original, imaginative, and analytical. A great student of human nature, you can recognize and appreciate the faults of mankind and depict them with wit and force. Your interests in life are as many and as varied that in youth you may have difficulty in selecting your career. In fact, you may find that you have more than one career interest. You are the type who may be allowed to develop all of your talents and being, it is a productive and successful material.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 23

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22): Don't let down on pursuing your major objective just because the weekend is coming. It's another banner day. CARBURN (Dec. 21-Jan. 20): You may be rather adventuresome in business, especially if you are in partnership with someone who is very astute. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19): Peace and harmony in all relationships—business, domestic and social—will pay the best possible dividends now.

Hat-Happy Girl Slightly Injured While Training

Melbourne, Nov. 22.

Soviet woman athlete, Nina Ponomareva, known the world over for her ability at throwing the discus as well as for her troubles with the British police over the case of the five hats, was slightly injured while training in Melbourne yesterday.

Her trainer said this morning that Nina's head injury was not at all serious and would not prevent her from continuing her training for the Olympic discus event.

It was not known whether Nina would take part in the Olympic discus at the opening ceremony later today or would rest up.

Another Soviet slightly injured in training yesterday was Galina Popova of the women's 4 x 100 metres relay team. She will also be able to continue her preparations.

Her Good Right Arm Puts Her In The U.S. Olympic Team

San Francisco.

The good right arm of a pretty San Francisco high school student won her a ticket to Melbourne, Australia, as a competitor in the discus event of the 1956 Olympic Games.

But even if you look closely, you won't see the muscles of young Pamela Kurrell bulging under her sleeves. They don't bulge.

Pamela is a discus thrower very different in appearance from Russia's leading discus thrower who made headlines and aroused an international incident in London recently.

Russia's 27-year-old star Nina Ponomareva is large, some 210 pounds. Pamela, 17, weighs in at only 129 pounds and is five-foot-five. Pamela is feminine looking. She wears her hair in a pony-tail.

But she's all athlete.

SECOND IN TRIALS

Pam beat women who outweighed her by as much as 100 pounds to get her ticket to Melbourne. She placed second in the Olympic trials. The one woman who beat her—Mary Earline Brown, a Los Angeles housewife who weighs 220 pounds—beaten her by less than four feet.

Pam set an American record in the women's discus a couple of months ago with a throw of 140 feet, 11 inches. Then Mrs. Brown came along and broke it in the tryouts with a toss of 145 feet, four inches.

But don't be surprised if Pamela beats her large teammate when the chips are down at Melbourne. She has been recognized as potentially one of the greatest woman track and field competitors of all time.

She won her way to the 1956 Olympic Games in the discus event, but she also takes a turn at the javelin and shot put.

BASEBALL THROWER

Pam isn't too bad with a baseball either. That's how she got her start in track. She started baseball with the boys in her neighborhood when she was seven years old. She doesn't like to brag, but she modestly admits she has thrown out a few of those neighborhood kids from as far as 300 feet away.

At Franklin Field in Philadelphia Pam threw a baseball 269 feet. The record was set by Min. fielder Dickson Sahas at 295 feet.

Charlie Dressen of the Washington Senators took a look at Miss Kurrell and said he thought she could heave one over 300 feet. Dressen said he wished all his outfielders could throw that well.

Hungarian Soccer Tour Declared Unauthorized

Paris, Nov. 21.

The Hungarian Football Federation's Revolutionary Council today decided to recall to Hungary immediately the Hungarian "Junior" football team, which has been touring abroad for over a month, Radio Budapest reported.

The scheduled matches the Hungarian Junior team was to have played in Austria and Italy were declared "unauthorized".

The Federation's Revolutionary Council, which was meeting in a special session, also granted the Perencvaros (formerly "Kispest") team permission to leave for a tour in Austria on condition that it returned to Budapest by Monday, December 10, at the latest.

ARCHIE QUICK Predicts

HOME COUNTRIES WILL GET INTO LINE ON THE SUBSTITUTE RULE

If there is anything certain in Soccer it is that next season England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland will agree to change over to the International Federation's rule that substitutes be allowed in games between the four Home countries. Whether they will decide on substitute goalkeepers only or allow deputies to come on up to half time remains to be seen.

That is the direct outcome of the England-Wales fiasco at Wembley when Welsh goalkeeper Jack Kelsey of the Arsenal was injured in the unlucky 13th minute and the game was immediately spoilt as a spectacle.

Kelsey came back for a while after the interval on the wing, but eventually had to retire and the match finished ten-a-side, for England's Colin Grainger was also a stretcher case late in the game. Mel Charles was also carried off in this disastrous international, only to return out of position, and brother John Charles, Johnny Haynes and Ray Daniel all finished limping.

With Kelsey and Mel Charles off for a considerable spell and skipper Alf Sherwood in goal Wales never had a chance to retain their one goal lead and were eventually beaten three-one.

Andy Graver, who may create a record by returning to Lincoln a third time.

In the heyday of Arsenal they would have scorned any connection, however remote, with a weekly competition based on the pools system, dividends and fixed odds. But that is just what has happened at Highbury.

The Supporters' Club have formed an Arsenal Football Auxiliary Supporters' Club to run a weekly competition for prize money for the initial purpose of building their own club house. It is not suggested that any of the money raised will be diverted to the funds of the Arsenal Football Club itself but the Supporters' Club, and therefore the Auxiliary Supporters' Club, are officially recognised by the parent body, and are integral parts of it on the social side.

The Auxiliary Supporters' Club are appealing for agents, who will get generous commission on cash collected. An additional inducement is that when a member wins a money prize the particular agent also collects a percentage.

AGENTS' GALORE

The Auxiliary Supporters' Club fee is 1/6d per week, comprising 3d subscription, 7d pools stake, and 2d fixed odds stake. Agents galore are wanted and they are each asked to enrol a minimum of 20 members. Seemingly they do not have to be members of the Supporters' Club, Season Ticket holders, or even Arsenal fans.

All well and good but I do feel that in the old days the Arsenal Football Club with a lordly wave of the hand would have willingly and generously given the Supporters' Club its club house. Remember, though, that last season the Arsenal made only just over £4,000 profit—a big difference from the huge sums of the past.

The streets of Leicester are plastered with bills announcing the Randolph Turpin versus Alex Buxton fight for the Cruiserweight Championship of Great Britain. No supporting items figure on the posters for the bout at Granby Hall is a sell-out. But local promoter Joe Jacobs tells me he has an added attraction for his customers in Hogan Bassey, the Nigerian holder of the British Empire Bantamweight Championship, but this is the first time ever in boxing that so distinguished a title-holder has not had public billing among the supporting cast!

There is likely to be a lot of anxious study of the fact that Grainger's injury came when he was turning simply on the turf without being tackled, and in the very spot where two international right-backs, Wally Dames, of Arsenal and Wales, and Jimmy Meadows, of Manchester City and England, were injured in succeeding Cup Finals. It seems significant, also, that apart from the younger Charles and Kelsey, who were hurt in tackles, three men finished this game limping. Is it too critical therefore to query the Wembley turf? It is rarely used, and players have often complained that it is loose and treacherous to run upon.

I think we may have seen the last of Tom Finney as England's centre-forward. Daniel Blotted him out of the match, just as Syd Owen did at Aston.

previous Saturday. Glory be, though, there is still Stanley Matthews. He is as brilliant as ever. On November 20 England play Yugoslavia at Wembley and the Blackpool Wizard is a certainty for outside-right. Which is more than can be said for most of the players in this lack lustre England eleven.

There is an hotel at a North London railway terminus which is the Mecca of football gossip writers at week-ends. Reason is that most of the teams play long League matches in the Metropolitan forerchies there on Friday nights. Not often, however, is the haul of news so good as when Newcastle United, Preston North End, Leicester City and Stoke City were there the week-end before last. And the horde of schoolboy autograph hunters had a successful time too.

Tom Finney was a centre of attraction not only on reputation but as England's latest centre-forward. The League's leading goalscorer, Arthur Rowe, also had a host of admirers.

Newcastle's honorary manager Stanley Seymour told me that having spent £16,000 on full-back Keith and inside-forward Eastham this season—both of them came from Northern Ireland—he did not, contrary to rumour, intend to go into the transfer market again yet awhile. His contention that the present side was good enough if it were allowed to settle down was borne out by their subsequent display at Tottenham.

LEADING TEAMS

Leicester and Stoke happen to be the two leading teams in Division Two, and there was a good-natured log pulling about the possibilities of promotion. I think Leicester are the best equipped side in the Division, but Director Len Sloman said the club was hoping to sign one of Glasgow's "Colts" reserve to be no trip up this time as there was last season," he said, "and our best insurance for the First Division is to strengthen our reserves and, if possible, duplicate all first team places."

Manager Cliff Brunting, of Preston, said quite frankly that he did not think his present team was good enough, although they have gained 18 points from the last 24 since Finney went to centre-forward. "It has been very much a one-man show," said Brunting, "and while I am fairly well satisfied with my defence, I am not sure that I have a good experienced forward or two if they were available—which they are not!"

But manager Frank Taylor told me that he was very well pleased with his team's form. "We are not likely to buy here," he said, "but we are going to buy a few more players in the next few weeks."

BREMEN CITY INN HAS 521 DIFFERENT WINES

Bremen, Nov. 21.
The City of Bremen's early 15th century Ratskeller claims to offer today the longest list of German white wines in the world.

Altogether the list contains 521 different wines, including 430 German white wines.

The Bremen Ratskeller, or wine inn, as it exists today, was founded in 1405, but historians have found records of a wine trading monopoly held by the City Council as far back as 1330.
In that year, indeed, the City Fathers decreed that anyone caught selling Rhine wines, then the common name for all German white wines, would be fined five marks. Five west marks are worth rather less than 10 shillings sterling today, but in those days the sum represented a heavy fine.

A FEATURE

Later, the wine monopoly lapsed but the Ratskeller continued in existence. Today, Ratskeller is a feature of most German towns.

The one at Bremen has seen many wars since its foundation, but most parts of it are as beautiful as ever and thousands of foreign visitors come each year to enjoy a drink and take home a copy of the wine list, printed on parchment.

Numerous traditions have grown up around the Ratskeller through the ages. Many wedding parties, for example, go there for refreshments between the civil and church marriage ceremonies, and ever since the guests assembled there for regular meetings, men who share the same profession or hobby meet at the Ratskeller for their social occasions.

When, formerly, the Bremen Senators, as the City proudly calls its councillors, got heated over a problem, they went to the Ratskeller through a secret staircase and there, surrounded by enormous casks, quickly found that they were of one opinion after all. Or so legend has it.

Profits from the City's wine trading have always gone into public funds. Once, they were spent almost entirely upon the upkeep of the City walls and soldiers to man them.

Now, they are put to more peaceful uses, such as homes for the people and schools for the children.

NO MONOPOLY

The post of a Ratskellermeister, or captain of the City's wine cellars, has always been a coveted position. In the old days, it carried with it many privileges, such as taxing other winekeepers, when the absolute monopoly was no longer enforced. Today, the man who rules over this connoisseur's paradise is a civil servant. He gets a salary and commission on sales which may well make the City Senators envious.

Today, too, there is no longer a monopoly. But, in accordance with tradition, the Ratskeller does not stock imported wines.
The inner sanctum of the Bremen Ratskeller is called
"The Rose"—a name which, historians believe, probably originated in the days when the City Hall was also the seat of the Court of Justice. The rose is found as a symbol of the law in many historic buildings when courts were wont to be held.

Another meaning, however, was given it by those who inscribed this quotation under the picture of the rose in the cellar:
"Cur Rosa, Flos Veneris, Bacchi depingitur antro?"

Causa, quod absque mero frigat ipsa Venus," which may be translated:

Radio Helps Search For Oil

US Research In Upper Atmosphere

One of the preliminaries to the forthcoming International Geophysical Year (July 1957-December 1958) will be the firing of "rockoons"— balloon-supported rockets—by the US Naval Research Laboratory. This will precede the more extensive research of the upper atmosphere which will take place during the Geophysical Year. The rockoons consist of plastic balloons 60 feet in diameter, supporting 12-foot long instrument-carrying rockets.

The scientific data obtained by the instruments will be radiated or telemetered back to the launching base. Picture left shows a rockoon starting its flight to the upper atmosphere. Through them scientists hope to learn more about the effects of solar
"storms" on radio fadeouts.

Picture right shows a rockoon ascending after being launched by radio signal from shipboard. Within about two minutes the rocket is expected to reach an altitude of 60 to 70 miles above the earth and to radio back to the observing station data on the strength of X-ray and ultraviolet radiation from the solar flare it has been aimed toward.—Express Photo.

United States Spend £16 Million On Short Wave Network

New York, Nov. 21.

The American oil industry has invested $16,000,000 to develop the use of radio as a means of saving millions of dollars in speeding up the industry.

For most people, radio provides music, news, descriptions of sports events, and other forms of entertainment and diversion at the twist of a dial. But for the petroleum industry's vast and complex operations, it is a versatile tool which defies weather, isolation, and distance—three factors which have much to do with the industry's business affairs on land and water.

Radio saves time, labour, and money by making possible essential communications over the wide open spaces characteristically involved in exploration, drilling, production, refining, and transportation.

With Radar

In addition it has been coupled with radar and other radio-location techniques in the Gulf of Mexico, enabling oil searchers to pinpoint drilling sites in vast expanses of water devoid of the normal marking points which would be available on land or closer to shore.

These radio combinations have enabled the searchers to penetrate fogs and low-visibility on occasions and carry out offshore surveying operations which might otherwise have been subjected to costly delays.

This technique, known more formally as "triangulation," is the procedure by which oilmen can return time and time again to a designated spot in a watery wilderness, usually to an accuracy of 20 feet or so.

Radar does the "locking," while two-way radio provides the "talking" link to checkpoints and boat crews.

The petroleum industry's first use of radio began in the early 1930's. Right from the start, it proved invaluable as an emergency device in Gulf of Mexico hurricanes. Since it takes a minimum of 24 hours to batten down an offshore installation and evacuate the personnel, the significance of radio for its "locking" and follow-through on weather and continuous communication was obvious.

Hurricanes can affect the lives of more than 3,000 men along the Gulf Coast, more than half of whom may be on offshore platforms or anchored barges at any one time, and a drilling investment of more than 325,000,000 dollars ($100,000,000 sterling).

Kindred Operations

Kindred petroleum operations in the inland waters of the Gulf involve another 10,000 persons and corresponding investment of more than 200,000,000 dollars. High winds and waves, preceding a hurricane, make abandonment hazardous, but radio provides the invisible link which helps to make the operation safe and possible.

Still other aspects of radio's life-saving versatility, on both land and sea, is the way help can be summoned rapidly for the ailing or the injured.
Offshore, seaplanes and speed-boats can be brought out quickly, while in swamps and isolated fields camp helicopters and small planes can be called for rescue duty via the airwaves.

Radio's day-to-day usage is more prosaic than dramatic.
But it has enabled oilmen generally to keep up the fast-moving pace that is mandatory in these days of spiralling consumption and even greater utilization of petroleum products.

It has enabled orthodox field operations to accomplish projects which otherwise might have been impossible, or at least so slow that they might never have been undertaken at
all. All over the world, wherever American oilmen have extended their far-flung empire, the radio techniques are being used with even more effectiveness than in the United States, because some of these areas are so primitive that their radio is the only means of communication.

Principal Use

Radio's principal use, therefore, is as a high-speed form of communication which would not normally be affected by weather, wire-laying problems, or relative distance.

It is used heavily by drillers and producers, particularly to speed instructions from headquarters to a drilling rig to reduce standby time, when operating costs in excess of 1,000 dollars a day are common.
Field crews involved in seismographic or other exploratory operations are in ready touch with their base camps,
whether they are in mountains, deserts, swamps, or rural countryside. This reduces the time involved in filing of reports and information, and also simplifies the question of supplies.

Radio has become such a key adjunct to the transportation of petroleum that the American Petroleum Institute's Division of Transportation some time ago set up a central committee on radio facilities.

Importance

Emphasizing radio's importance to transportation is the fact that they already have invested more than 50,000,000 dollars ($16,000,000 sterling) in thousands of miles of radio-wave (ultra short wave) systems.
Statistics show that petroleum transportation takes one-and-a-half times as much microwave as do all other common carriers
in the United States.—China

SPANIARDS CONDEMN RUSSIA

Madrid, Nov. 21.

Spanish opinion, with the exception of the Communists and their friends, has been unanimous in condemning the Soviet action in Hungary. But on the Suez issue there has been some discrepancy.

Some people, particularly of the older age groups, approved of the Anglo-French action in Egypt. They commented that they liked to see Britain and France acting without American tutelage.

For these people, it seemed that the hand of history had moved back to days which they regarded as happier ones.

Seems Clear

The press has not reflected any of the finer shades of public opinion. Under government directives, it has been solidly critical of Russia, Britain and France.

In spite of the difficulty of assessing public feeling in nation without a free press, it seems clear that the majority of public opinion has been opposed to both the Hungarian repression and to the invasion of Egypt.

The shadow of the civil war still hangs over Spain and there is a strong desire for internal and international peace.—China

Third Quarter
Net Wipes Out
Loss To Date

New York, Nov. 21. TWA reversed its earlier 1956 trend to produce third quarter net earnings of $5,866,000 on a record volume of $69,420,000, up 7.8% from 1955, it was announced today. Last year's third quarter earnings were $4,186,000.

Net for the nine months was $17,000,000 or 5 cents a share on $181,530,000 operating revenue compared with $5,154,000 or 1.54¢ on $103,433,000 a year ago. The difference resulted from heavy losses in the first quarter which bore the brunt of expenses for additional maintenance and service facilities. Through nine months, TWA boarded 3,305,572 passengers, an average of nearly 12,000 a day and 9.3% more than in 1955. Revenue passenger miles increased by 369 million to a total of 3 billion 1 million, 117,000 ahead of last year. Excess ton miles were up 8.6%. Freight ton miles also showed an increase. The only declining category was mail ton miles which was off one-tenth of one percent.

A new policy in effect for the nine months reduces depreciation expense by increasing residual values on latest type aircraft and engines. The amount of this adjustment was $2,100,000.

TARIFF
PLEA
REJECTED

Washington, Nov. 21. The United States Tariff Commission today rejected the plea for an increase on the tariff rates of imported cotton yarn.

The Commission recommended in a report to the President that the present duty of 12½ per cent be retained.

"The Commission found that cotton yarn cases are not being imported into the United States in such increased quantities, either actual or relative, as to cause or threaten seriously to injure domestic industry producing like or similar competitive articles," the report said.

"The Commission therefore made no recommendation to the President for withdrawal of modification of the concession of 12½ per cent to such articles," it said.

Agreement
MOST IMPORTANT
DEVELOPMENT
SINCE OTTAWA

Canberra, Nov. 21. The Acting Trade Minister, Mr William McMahon, described the new Anglo-Australian trade agreement as without doubt the most important development in Australia's overseas trade policy since the principles of reciprocal preferential tariff treatment were placed on a formal basis by the Ottawa agreement of 1932.

Mr McMahon said Australia's two main objectives had been achieved in the new agreements. These were the maintenance of preferences given to Australian products in the United Kingdom and the vital necessity of relieving the Australian economy of excessive costs imposed in preferential margins granted to United Kingdom goods under the Ottawa agreement.

The Australian Government felt that a national preference arrangement was still in the best interests of the Australian economy provided there were significant opportunities for reducing the costs of import goods, development wider trade possibilities with other countries and obtaining a degree of protection against restrictive practices for Australian commodity exports.

Obvious Advantages
The margin of preference in United Kingdom goods should secure the latter a sound share in Australia's trade, Mr McMahon added.

The Director of the Associated Chambers of Manufacturers, Mr Latham Withall, said the new agreement would have very obvious advantages over the previous Ottawa agreement.

The reduced margins of preference would do little harm to Britain he said, because it was usual for Australian industry to get its capital goods from the UK whenever possible.

"The general result seemed mutually favourable, he continued. The margin of preference in favour of UK goods should secure Britain a sound share in Australia's trade. On the other hand, it seems that the Government has actively protected Australian industries and succeeded in maintaining the best possible terms for Australia's exports to Great Britain," he added.—China Mail Special.

RUBBER
MARKETS

New York, Nov. 21. The No. 1 RSS rubber futures contract today closed 5 points lower with sales of five contracts.

The rex contract closed unchanged to 20 points higher with sales of 100 contracts.

Standard contract closed 5 points lower to 35 points higher with sales of five contracts.

Pre-holiday covering and the higher bids on shipment offerings steadied the market after a shaky start.

Buyers also anticipated a sharp increase in the October consumption figures over the 12,000 tons reported for September. The official figures were expected to be published over the Thanksgiving holiday.

Factory and other consumer interest in the spot market, however, remained slow. Spot No. 1 RSS in the normal market was quoted nominally at 34½ cents a pound. However, because of the dock workers' strike situation, one sheet available for warehouse for delivery within 24 hours were offered up to 36 cents a pound.

SINGAPORE
The market opened lower on overseas advices and steadied before the morning session ended on short covering.

New York Sugar
Market
New York, Nov. 21. World No. 4 sugar futures closed today 10 points higher to 11 points lower with sales of 803 contracts.

The domestic No. 6 sugar futures closed 2 to 7 points lower with sales of 310 contracts.

The unsettled dock workers strike and an active demand for raws closed the March world contract on a note of strength, after a lower opening. Later months also recovered from the lows in face of heavy profit-taking and hedge selling.

News of the 100,000 tons boost in the 1956 import quotas spurred pre-holiday liquidation and hedging in the domestic contract. Futures:

WORLD COTTON SUPPLIES
REACH HIGHEST LEVEL SINCE 1946

Washington, Nov. 21. World cotton supplies reached their highest level since 1946 this year with an estimated 24,100,000 bales on hand on July 31, 1956, the US Department of Agriculture's Foreign Crops and Markets Survey said today.

The 1956 figure is 1,500,000 bales higher than in 1955. Cotton stocks have risen steadily since the postwar low of 11,800,000 bales recorded in 1951. Most of the increase has come from greater US production, the survey said.

While supplies on hand in the United States rose 3,300,000 bales during 1955-56 they dropped 1,800,000 bales in foreign nations.

Free World
Most free world cotton exporting nations had disposed of old-crop cotton surpluses by Aug. 1, 1956, the survey said. Stock reductions in major cotton exporting nations ranged from 21 per cent in Brazil to 67 per cent in Mexico.

In cotton importing nations stocks on hand were the lowest since World War II—4,000,000 bales, about three or four months supply for foreign cotton mills.

Uncertainties
The Soviet Union probably has less cotton stocks on hand now due to a nine per cent drop in cotton production in 1955-56 over the previous year. However, stocks in China may have gone up as a result of a favourable harvest there.

Stock reductions in extra-long-staple cotton-producing nations ranged from 10 per cent in Peru to 40 per cent in the Sudan. The uncertain political situation in Egypt, a prime producer of long staple cotton, has made demand grow in other producing nations.—United Press.
